In particular, please set aside some time on Sunday, October 2 to enjoy the Society's Tour of Homes. As described in the article below, the tour will highlight six beautiful homes in Grandview Heights and Marble Cliff that show off a variety of architectural styles and offer a glimpse into the history of our communities.

The homes have included those of community founders, local- and nationally-known industrialists, business persons, artists, and politicians. #### Research Your Own Home's History

House History Research Tips from the Library

Grace Freeman, GHPL librarian, offers the following advice on how best to research your home's past.

"I view home history research as doing genealogy research for where you live. Whether you rent or own, the place you live has a history, however long or short. Even if the building itself is recently built, the land on which it sits and the neighborhood that surround it are part of your home's history.

When doing home history research, there are some "go-to" resources I recommend:

- County Auditor records list ownership/transfers, mapping/structural outlines, permits/construction, and other unique notes relating to a property. In Franklin County, this information is available (back to 1920) online at franklincountyauditor.com. You can search by address or current owner's name. I start by viewing the "Historical Parcel Sheets" and recent transfers (both found in a property's "Transfers" section). You'll see the names/dates of each owner and values for the property and buildings at that time. They have physical records older than 1920 for some properties, which can be accessed in person in some cases. Next, I investigate those individuals using traditional genealogy research tools. Ancestry.com and local historical newspaper records especially, are very helpful and can be accessed through local libraries.
- Newspaper articles often listed the address of the person who lived there, and you may find real estate ads describing the property, some of which may even include a photo.
- Historical societies will often have information on local properties and homeowners, sometimes including photo collections and reminiscences. Also, they may be able to introduce you to living resources with recollections and can give great information on the community overall. (ghmchs.org)
- Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps were published by the Sanborn Map Company in the 19th and early 20thcenturies. They show streets, buildings (location and overhead outline), and materials used to determine firerisk/liability. Available online (ghpl.org/research).
- MLS Real Estate Cards is a resource unique to Central Ohio available from the Columbus Metropolitan Library's My History Collection (columbuslibrary.org/myhistory/). This is a collection of scanned cards from the Multiple Listing Service used by realtors (pre-internet) to sell homes, including photos, descriptions, and details about the home. Not all homes are featured, but the collection includes more than 100,000 cards for Central Ohio homes sold from the 1950s-1970s."

Thanks to Grace for providing this advice on how best to find historical information of your family's home.

Meet the Society's Newest Trustee

Teri Williams has joined the Society as its newest Trustee. As a Board member, she will help guide the Society in determining and achieving its goals of collecting and preserving our local history.

Teri brings to the Board her own personal local history. She is the daughter of Ralph and Marlene Antolino (80-year residents of Grandview Heights and Marble Cliff) and lived in Grandview Heights for 56 years. Teri met her husband Brad while a student at Grandview Heights High School and they raised their two daughters in Grandview Heights.

Teri has been active in the community. In her youth, she worked at the Grandview Heights pool (see photo below). Currently, she is a member of the Board of the Grandview Heights Public Library, Vice President of the Grandview Heights High School Alumni Association, and a 30-year member of the Grandview Civic Welfare Club.

Head Lifeguard Teri Williams leaps from the high dive as Teri shares, "My love of Grandview is deep. I felt safe everywhere in Grandview whether walking, riding my bike, or roller skating. When I was young, there was lots to do on summer mornings with Grandview Parks and Recreation playground programs at Pierce Field, trips to the library, playing in the freezing cold spring-fed swimming pool, swim team, and just being outside. Fall brought the Ox Roast and hunting for buckeyes at Wyman Woods. In winter, I spent as much time as snow would allow on the sledding hill at Parkway and Oxley. When the city bought the pool around 1978, I was hired as head lifeguard and ran the swim lessons and other programs there. The next summer I was hired as the manager and for the next few years hired a super staff of mostly Grandview people who loved the community too.

I enjoy culinary arts, vegetable gardening, family and friends. People energize me"

Please join in welcoming Teri to the Board.

A Moment In Time Revisited

Aladdin Country Club Caddy

In March of 1919, the Shriners of the Aladdin Temple purchased the Arlington Country Club property located north of First Avenue and west of Arlington Avenue. The property included 17 acres of grounds, a club house (shown here), a bowling house, locker and shower buildings, tennis courts and a nine hole golf course that spanned the railroad tracks on the west side of the Village of Marble Cliff. After extensive remodeling and landscaping (with plans to enlarge the golf course to 18 holes) it reopened as the Aladdin Country Club, "a place for pleasure, entertainment and exercise" for its members. The club expanded its membership with golf as the major sport. The insert is a picture of the badge worn by resident Bernie Nardone, who was a caddie for the golfing Shriners in the year from 1923 to 1924. The club served its members until it closed its doors in 1925. It was never expanded to 18 holes, but many of its influential members left the Club to establish the Scioto Country Club just to the north of the Aladdin, which remains historically one of the first country clubs in central Ohio.

A new Moment In Time can be found bi-weekly on the Society's website.

NOTE: A home built on the site of the Aladdin Country Club clubhouse is one of this year's Tour of Homes; fun to imagine golf being played on the home's backyard in the day!
